Public event will highlight study reviewing efficiency, effectiveness of York County public school districts

Editors: A consultant's independent study reviewing the efficiency of operations of York County's 16 public school districts will be released at a public event

Tuesday, February 26, 2008 at 7 p.m. at Alumni Hall inside the Iosue Student Union Building on the York College of Pennsylvania campus, Country Club Road, York.

The study, "Identifying Areas for Enhanced Cooperation and Efficiency in York County's school districts," looks at teachers, aides, administrative staff and support staff per student; regular and special instructional spending per student, adjusted for cost of living; teacher salaries and benefits, adjusted for cost of living; and maintenance and operation costs. It identifies positive conditions and makes some recommendations for continued improvement.

Representatives of the consulting firm that prepared the study will be on hand to present it to the community.

Please upfile this information for February 26. Thanks!
